The renowned landscape architect Enzo Enea has designed the interior of MY ENGELBERG, the latest 180' Amels Limited Editions.

OCEAN Management, the project management division of OCEAN Independence, reports on the remarkable teamwork of the Swiss based Enea interior design team with superyachting design, interior and management experts.

For the Owner of the yacht, a repeat client of Enzo Enea for residential and landscape architecture, it was clear that Enzo should also design the interior of his first large yacht. This brought the heart of the project design and off-site management to its natural home in Switzerland. This is where the yacht's namesake, the idyllic mountain village of Engelberg, is found, along with the head offices of the yacht's project management and the Owner's brokerage company. Enea were also responsible for the choice of exterior colour scheme and exterior deck layout as well as the logo design and branding for the yacht.

"We found this concept so interesting and a little unusual, that we immediately took notice" Daniel Küpfer, Project & Management Director of OCEAN Management says "naturally, working on their first yacht, any designer would need some competent advice to make a good start; so we spoke to a design office, which we believed would be self-confident enough to give another designer some assistance."

The choice was quickly made with Focus Yacht Design from Bremen, Germany volunteering, having just completed the exterior design for a series of 70m yachts. "We didn't have problem working together with another designer coming from different area of design and wanting to put his ideas in place. We believe there should be much more co-operation in the field of yacht design. People are often too apprehensive to share their ideas" noted Christian Schäfer, Partner at Focus Yacht Design.

From page to reality, Kai Dittmar, Managing Director of the reputable interior manufacturer Metrica commented "Naturally we had some reservations about working with a designer who is more at home in the world of landscape design. However, we soon learnt better. The quality of drawings, the understanding of the material and the responsiveness of Enea was always simply excellent. The result speaks for itself and it is remarkable."

"It is astonishing to see what we have been able to create, our vision for ENGELBERG evolved logically and naturally with the sea as our muse. The interiors reflect the true beauty of nature's coastal landscapes in shades of rich green, warm sand, earth tones and hues of blue. Guests on board will enjoy the most luxurious pleasures modern interior design can offer. The modest yet ingenious design is a homage to the origins of sea travel: sailing and ships." Enzo Enea
