Racing champion Emerson Fittipaldi chooses to make Park Grove home

Park Grove's unparalleled location in desirable Coconut Grove is one of many reasons why world champion auto racing driver Emerson Fittipaldi purchased a family residence there, says a spokesperson for the development.

The elegant residences at Park Grove offer a serene retreat in the vibrant center of Miami, and the extraordinary views make this the ultimate mix of waterfront living and vibrant society, all within a breathtaking natural landscape at the edge of Biscayne Bay, says the spokesperson.

"You're so close to South Beach and to Miami International airport at Park Grove, and you can have a boat right next door at one of the world-class marinas," says the Brazil-born former racing driver, who has won the Formula One World Championship, the Indianapolis 500 and the CART championship. "My children attend school in Coconut Grove, and with the Grove's seven public and private schools, they can't wait to invite their friends over to swim in the amazing 600-foot pool or to hang out at the basketball court." He notes that the many outdoor cafes, restaurants, boutiques and cinemas that flourish along the brick-paved sidewalks of the Village of Coconut Grove are very appealing too.

Park Grove's private six-acre grounds are being designed by Swiss-born landscaping genius Enzo Enea with tropical gardens and walkways that are in harmony with the area's natural beauty, says the spokesperson. The prestigious South Bayshore Drive enclave is surrounded by public parks, and its experienced developers, Terra Group and The Related Group, have pledged that the amenity-rich community will honor the Grove's unique ambiance, says the spokesperson.

"Nearby Kennedy Park, Peacock Park, the Kampong National Tropical Botanic Garden and The Barnacle Historic State Park make this a magical place to live. We'll be right across the street from the new 17-acre Regatta Park, and a short drive from the beaches of Key Biscayne and Miami Beach," says Fittipaldi.

In 1985, Fittipaldi entered the auto race once run on downtown Miami's streets, driving a car called The Spirit of Miami.

"My history here started with the Miami Grand Prix," he explains. "I love it here because the city combines a Latin flavor with the American sense of organization, making this a great place to live." The Fittipaldi family's new home is only four miles from the Brickell area, where a section of SW 10th Street was named Fittipaldi Way following his 1989 win at the Indianapolis 500.

ily man, Fittipaldi sees the wisdom of purchasing a luxury residence in Coconut Grove, where property values are known for long-term stability. “I deeply admire the track records of developers Pedro and David Martin, and of Jorge Perez. Nothing else can match the high quality and the elegant, relaxed lifestyle they have created at Park Grove.”
